"Abdicate! Resign! Get Out!" Hungarians Shout at Premier Tisza

PREMIER TISZA

Dark were the clouds that hung over the Hungarian parliament when it reconvened, and red gleamed the anger of the people against the government, as reflected by a large portion of the house. A constant chorus and refrain, "Abdicate! Resign! Get out! You have betrayed the fatherland!" greeted Premier Tisza in what was one of the wildest and most tumultuous sessions in years, even in the most uncommonly tempestuous Hungarian parliament. The Karolyi, Apponyi, Justh and Andrássy parties, but more especially Karolyi and Justh, hurled accusation after accusation at Tisza that the Hungarian nation had been deceived and misled as to the imminence of the Roumanian entrance into the war and charged that the government and its diplomacy had been the dupe of Roumanian cunning, which had brought so much misery, suffering and loss to the people of the richest sections of Hungary, where thousands of refugees were suddenly compelled to flee before the unexpected invasion when resting secure under Tisza's assurances of Aug. 24. Count Cserin, the Austro-Hungarian minister at Bucharest, was called a traitor. Count Tisza, for his part, frankly admitted that every branch in the government, diplomatic and military, had been misled and deceived by Roumanian. He fell back upon the "reliance placed in a king's word" and expressed the hope that "with God's help Roumania would not escape its fate." Count Tisza appealed for unity on the part of the Hungarian people in this grave hour and in that was seconded by Counts Apponyi and Andrássy despite their scathing criticism.

RETURNING TORPEDO PROVES TO BE SHARK

(Newport Dispatch, N. Y. Herald.) Following a lecture at the War College this afternoon by Rear Admiral Austin M. Knight, president of the entire Atlantic fleet steamed this evening for the southern drill ground of the Chesapeake capes.

The battleships as they moved slowly out to sea in single file formation presented an inspiring spectacle. Many members of the villa colony gathered at those houses bordering the water on the bay side to see the fleet go out. The vessels were the Arkansas, the Delaware, the Florida, the Kansas, the Michigan, the Minnesota, the New Hampshire, the New York, the Pennsylvania, the South Carolina, the Texas, the Utah, the Vermont, the Wyoming and the North Carolina.

The destroyer division, in command of Rear Admiral Albert Gleaves, left there soon afterward for the same rendezvous. They will return to Newport the latter part of September to prepare for torpedo practice in Buzzards Bay during October. This will be the first time that the whole flotilla has rendezvoused in those waters, and valuable experiments in torpedo firing will be carried on.

The torpedo testing barge No. 1, while on the range in the upper Narragansett Bay, had a novel experience. Frequently a torpedo fired will go wrong and act as a boomerang and, turning a circle, will come back, striking the vessel from which it is fired. Although there are no explosives used in this practice, the force of the missile is sufficient sometimes to sink a craft, which happened to the practice ship Vesuvius two years ago. As a protection against such possible tricks a net is placed about the barge, similar to those used by battleships.

One morning a torpedo was fired and its course became obscured. Those in charge anxiously awaited the results and in a few minutes the net was seen to shake and tear in a most remarkable manner. The crew quickly took to the boats to save what they supposed the returning torpedo caught in the steel meshes. A slight glimpse at the shape of the missile proved that it had slightly decreased in size and yet increased in activity. It proved to be a nine foot shark and fought gamely before the sailors could kill it and get it on board. It was taken to the torpedo station on board the torpedo boat Morris, where it attracted much attention.

The destroyers steaming with the cruiser Birmingham, flagship, were the Balch, the Cassin, the Conyngham, the Cushing, the Drayton, the Ericsson, the Fanning, the Jarvis, the McDougal, the Paulding, the Porter, the Tucker, the Winslow, the Wadsworth and the Sterett. The tender Yachelle, the collier O'Brien, the mine depot ship Baltimore and the mine training ship Dubuque and the collier Jupiter also went with the ships.

RUSSIAN DEMOCRACY.

Much has been written about the democracy existing in the French army, and this spirit has been highly lauded by many American correspondents on the western front. That a similar spirit of comradeship between officers and men permeates the Russian forces is a fact, according to excellent testimony, although not so much has been written about it. Autocratic as the Russian government has been and still is, in many ways, the heaven of democracy is now said to be working in the army, and the result may be that Russia will gain a lasting good from the struggle and trial through which she is passing. The relation between the average Russian general and his troops partakes of the sentiment existing between a father and his sons. "My children" is the common form of address used by an officer in talking to his men. Prates do not hesitate to address officers in a manner which, although respectful, is still very unfamiliar. Of course, there are still to be found Russian officers who demand the observance of the rigid formalities of peacetime, but they are comparatively few. And they are becoming fewer, for those in high command have found that these martinets do not get nearly as much from their men as those who adopt the manner of easy friendliness. Nor is this manner a mere pose. In the maelstrom of war, with its common hardships, the Russians of high and low degree are coming to understand each other, while the Jew and the Jew are mingling on terms of cordiality undreamed of before the war.

WAR CURES "NERVES?"

That insanity and mental and nervous ailments have decreased in Great Britain since the outbreak of the war is the remarkable statement of Dr. William Graham, of Belfast, a recognized authority. Vast numbers of men afflicted with neurasthenia and "nerves" have found army life a cure for their ailments, declares Dr. Graham. The petty trials of every day life have worn their nervous systems "to a frazzle," but when called upon to risk the supreme sacrifice of death they have forgotten all those fears and inhibitions which formerly held sway in their minds. These men, once full of qualms of every variety known to the hypochondriac, have cast aside their melancholy and are now really living for the first time, says Dr. Graham. Moreover, many who at home were afraid to cross a street lest they be run over by a motor car, have now become brave and gallant warriors of the type who would—to use an American simile—

"charge hell with a bucket of water".

Of these Dr. Graham says: "Only when summoned to possible surrender of life have they learned how wonderful life really is. The physical regime under which these men are compelled to live can have nothing but the best effect on those subject to its discipline." Dr. Graham finds that the war has having a similar beneficial effect upon hysterical and nervous or pampered women. "These sheltered daughters of the merchant or professional man, victims of mid-Victorian ideas of gentility, are now falling into line with their sisters of the upper and the humbler social ranks, and are discovering that life holds something more than pampering of symptoms, the latest novel, or the tepid gossip of a church sewing meeting. Healthy and unselfish activity is now the rule among these war-enfranchised women. The war has freed them from the benumbing conventionalities which stifled their psychic energy, and has so contribed to their soundness of mind and nerve."
